

Sinclair Broadcasting is planning to use the public airways to attack one candidate for the Presidency on its extensive network of stations. The public airways should be a source undominated by one point of view.

The public interest is not served when large companies control the airwaves. Oversight is needed to regulate users of the public airways to prevent blatant partisanship.